BATTLE RAGING. ADDIS ABABA

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

AMERICANS, who in 1929 thought more of transportation than they did of homes, were of the same opinion in 1935—only more so. The current news release of the Department of Commerce, comparing total retail sales of all commodities, tells me that the retail food stores (25 per cent) and the automotive outlets (21 per cent) "continue to receive the largest share of the consumer's retail dollar, as they did in 1929 and during each subsequent year to the present time."

3 Errors in Law Keep Up Insurance Rate, Says Gentry

Declares Fund for Arson
Suppression Entirely
Too Small

DEFENSE FAVORED

And Insurance Companies
Are Forced to Pay
"Face" of Policy

LITTLE ROCK.—Three flaws in the general structure of fire insurance legislation which make it difficult for Arkansas property owners to obtain decreases in rates were pointed out Monday by U. A. Gentry, state commissioner of insurance, at an address at the eleventh annual convention of the American Association of Insurance General Agents, here.

His first criticism was that the appropriation for prevention and control of fires and suppression of arson was so small that effective policing of the state's 53,335 miles could not be carried on.

A Faulty Law

A second drawback, he said, "is the general statute providing that arson convictions may not be had on the uncorroborated testimony of accomplices. Enlarging on that detail, Mr. Gentry said:

"If we had five persons implicated in incendiary fires and confessions were obtained from four of them, their testimony uncorroborated would not be sufficient to convict the fifth person. This is one of the legal relics of antiquity that remains without rhyme or reason and often is the means of the most guilty escaping punishment and continuing their nefarious practices. It is my opinion that incendiaryism is responsible for an astonishing percentage of the loss ratio."

Temptation Offered

As for the third flaw, "The policy of the law in this state, and many others, is to furnish temptation for the person who might be inclined to sell his property to an insurance company. It even makes such a procedure profitable."

"Under the state law the insurance company must pay the face value of the policy whenever there is total destruction of property, regardless of the actual value of the property. A man may succeed in getting his belongings insured for twice their value, but once the policy is issued there is nothing the company can do about it afterward."

"If none but the contracting parties in such deals were affected that situation might be considered one of small amount, but in reality the entire insuring public is involved, Mr. Gentry said."

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine said Tuesday that John Fiorenza, 24, upholsterer's helper, had admitted the slaying of Mrs. Nancy Evans Titterton. The young man was one of four who reported finding the body in the bathroom of the Titterton apartment. Valentine said Fiorenza admitted assaulting the 34-year-old author and then strangling her. He was traced, the commissioner said, by a piece of twine with which Mrs. Titterton had been bound.

Flood Control Is Passed by Senate

272-Million Overton Measure Adopted Without Opposition

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Without an opposition vote the senate Tuesday passed the 272-million-dollar Overton bill for flood control on the lower Mississippi river and sent it to the house.

The Overton bill would authorize the 272-million expenditure for a system of floodways and reservoirs in Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi and Missouri. Overton said he anticipated no trouble in obtaining favorable congressional action.

Denies Being Away as House Burned

Pink W. Taylor Recalls
Throwing Ice-Water
on Fire at Patmos

Pink W. Taylor, formerly of Patmos, Tuesday denied press reports that he was away from home when a house rented by him from L. L. Middlebrooks burned last December 24 at Patmos.

"I was very much at home. I well remember helping extinguish the blaze with ice water that cold December morning. Besides myself and family we had relatives visiting us from Louisiana when the fire broke out," Mr. Taylor declared.

Four Hempstead county men have been indicted in connection with the burning of the house.

Mr. Taylor asked The Star to announce that he had moved to his new home on Highway 28 near the Hope High School building.

Bar Set Against Destitute Labor

Colorado National Guard

less Persons

TRINIDAD, Col. —(AP)—Nineteen Spanish-Americans were detained in Colorado Monday night while Gov. Ed. C. Johnson considered extending his martial law border patrol to the eastern boundary in his determination to keep destitute workers out of the state.

The men held were apprehended near Monument, Col., more than 100 miles inside the state border when National Guardsmen patrolled a mile-wide strip across the 360 miles of the Colorado-New Mexico border. Guards men were ordered to escort them out of the state.

In Denver another smaller party was ordered to leave.

The governor said that both parties come under his classification of "destitute workers." He believed the 19 held at Monument to be sugar beet workers, the type of labor he wishes particularly to keep out of the state. Sugar beet and railroad officials denied the governor's charge that they were attempting to import workers.

Ousted U. S. Judge Heads South

Arson Trials Are Put Off to July

April Term of Circuit Court to Adjourn Probably Wednesday

The L. L. Middlebrooks arson case in which four Hempstead county men are held under bond will not be heard in circuit court during the April term. All four cases were set for Tuesday of the third Monday during the July term of court. Illness of an attorney representing one of the defendants was said to have caused postponement of the cases.

Court was not in session at Washington Tuesday, having been recessed Monday afternoon until 9 a. m. Wednesday.

Officials at the courthouse said that circuit court would probably be concluded with Wednesday's session.

Landon Push May Force Hoover and Borah to Alliance

All Three Seek Recognition as Candidate of the West

CAUTIOUS ATTACK

Neither Hoover Nor Borah
Have Criticized Landon Openly

By BYRON PRICE
Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington

Nothing else thus far in the Republican pre-convention campaign has caused more comment than the spectacle of certain friends of Herbert Hoover standing shoulder to shoulder with certain friends of William E. Borah across the pathway of the Landon boom.

For months Mr. Hoover and Mr. Borah have been looked upon by a large section of the public as symbolizing entirely opposite and possibly irreconcilable wings of Republican thought.

Whatever the principals themselves may have been thinking, the impression among some of their followers has gone even farther than that.

The Borah people have supposed that whatever Mr. Hoover did in the campaign would be tinged with a hope that the Borah influence would be, thereby, held in check. Similarly, the Hoover people have felt that whatever Mr. Borah did would be directed largely against a return to the Hoover leadership.

Under these circumstances, it has been taken for granted that in every important party movement, the two would be found on opposite sides of the fence. That is what attracts so much attention to the current situation with respect to Governor Landon.

No Direct Statements

It should be borne in mind that neither Mr. Hoover nor Mr. Borah has spoken out directly against Mr. Landon—has made any attack on him, or pronounced him unacceptable as a presidential candidate.

Yet the physical facts, as they have developed in various important stories, are as much a part of the story as anything which might have been said or left unsaid by either the former president or the senator from Idaho. Not only have some of the Borah lieutenants openly accused Mr. Landon of being the candidate of certain financial interests, but Mr. Borah himself has pressed his candidacy vigorously in states where that course collided forcibly with plans of the Landon workers.

In his own state of California, Mr. Hoover's political associates have actively opposed a Landon-pledged state of delegates. When it appeared that a three-way primary battle would split the opposition to the Landon slate, Mr. Borah stayed out of California, leaving the field to the Hooverites.

The inside story about these developments is not available. There always is the danger that some of the implications may not be warranted. Yet such facts as do appear speak for themselves.

Consequences Unclear

The consequences cannot be assessed, of course, until the battle over the nomination has proceeded much farther.

It is quite apparent that the supporters of Mr. Landon are seeking to establish him as the candidate of the west—a section where both Mr. Hoover and Mr. Borah reside. They have not encouraged open declaration for him among the eastern leaders.

Wanting the nomination himself it is understandable that Mr. Borah should be against any candidate who took an early lead in the number of delegates. However, it is now far he is prepared to go with his opposition, in the convention itself, if his own candidacy fails.

Mr. Hoover is in a somewhat different position. He has hinted that he is not a candidate, but he never has disavowed a desire to have something to say about the nomination. Some of his friends believe the real key to his position is a long-cherished determination not to let the party fall into the hands of the eastern old-liners, several of whom have volunteered approved word about Governor Landon.

Casualties in Fighting in Palestine Reach 20

JERUSALEM, Palestine.—(AP)—Violent outbreaks between Jews and Arabs at Tel Aviv and nearby towns continued Tuesday, bringing the total of injured persons to 20 in three days of disorders, the Jewish Telegraphic Agency reported Tuesday.

Bulletins

MOOSE RIVER, Nova Scotia.—(Copyright Associated Press)—Although two men trapped in the gold mine here indicated they were prepared for death after nine days of suffering, hope that they might be rescued alive before nightfall was expressed at noon Tuesday. Michael Dwyer, Nova Scotia's minister of mines, who personally is directing the rescue efforts, stated that "a few hours at the outside should suffice to reach the men."

CLEVELAND, Ohio.—(AP)—The National Republican Committee Tuesday named Senator Frederick C. Steiwer, of Oregon, as keynote and temporary chairman of the national Republican convention opening here June 9.

Ralph Bailey Files for Circuit Clerk

Well Known Hope Man
Becomes Candidate for Hempstead Office

Another candidate to appear in the race for circuit clerk, is Ralph Bailey, of Hope, who this week announces his candidacy for that office.

Mr. Bailey, having lived in and near Hope, and the southern part of the county, the greater part of his life, needs no introduction to the people of Hope and Southern Hempstead county. But to those of Washington, Ozark and the north part of the county, where he is not so well known, he addresses this brief message concerning himself and his candidacy:

He is 38 years old, still a young man, but old enough, with business experience enough to fully realize the responsibilities of the office for which he is asking. This is the first time he has asked for public office of any kind, and if elected, he promises to devote himself to an efficient and courteous administration of the affairs of the circuit clerk's office. He invites you to look into his past record, both private and business, and asks for your careful consideration of his candidacy for this place.

For the past 17 years, Mr. Bailey, has been employed most of the time by three business houses in Hope: First, being employed by Johnson & Billingsley, one of the largest and oldest business houses in Hope at that time. From there he went with Hitt's Shoe store; since then, having been employed by one of the largest business houses in southwest Arkansas, Geo. W. Robison & Co.

Previous to these business connections, Mr. Bailey taught school for three years in the rural schools of Nevada county. These business connections have made him well and favorably acquainted with many of the citizens from all parts of the county. Mr. Bailey will try, if possible, to see every voter in the county, personally, and should you see fit to give him your full support, he promises that the affairs of this office will be conducted in a way that you will never regret that you openly supported him. Mr. Bailey's formal announcement of his candidacy will be found in the editorial column of this issue of The Star.

Alabama to Build a Cotton Highway

Submits Proposal to U. S. for Construction of 150 Miles

MONTGOMERY, Ala. —(AP)—The Alabama Highway Commission Monday submitted to the United States Bureau of Public Roads a program for paving 150 miles of highway with bituminous surfacing, using cotton fabric as a reinforcing agency. An allotment of $1,300,000 has been made to Alabama by the federal government to finance the program, and hundreds of thousands of yards of cotton fabric would be used, engineers said.

Extensive research will be made co-operatively by the Bureau of Public Roads and the Highway Commission that a detailed history of the experiment may be compiled.

Highway engineers said the first layer of bituminous surfacing is placed on top of the road base, and while still soft, the cotton cloth or fabric is spread on the surface. When it has cooled sufficiently, another layer of bituminous surfacing is played on the fabric, and then the final surface coat is laid.

Advocates of the cotton paving contend its use not only reinforces the bituminous surfacing but prevents its cracking and improves its resistance to water.

FLEEING FROM CITY

Thousands Pouring Out of Addis Ababa in Search of Safety

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia.—(Reuters)—A fierce battle was reported raging north of this capital city of Ethiopia Tuesday. But no details of the engagement were forthcoming immediately.

Italians Lose Skirmish

LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—An Exchange Telegraph correspondent at Addis Ababa reported Tuesday he had heard unofficially that an Ethiopian column from the northwest had cut through the line of advancing Italian troops near Dessye.

This information said the Ethiopians withdrew after a short hand-to-hand combat in which many Italians were killed and a number of Italian trucks destroyed.

Celebration in Rome

ROME, Italy.—(AP)—Thousands of Romans stood cheering in the square in front of Premier Mussolini's office Tuesday as Mussolini proclaimed on the anniversary of the founding of Rome that:

"Our ship has arrived in Rome with all sails spread."

Reports from the front said the expected capture of Addis Ababa had not yet materialized.

Fleeing From Capital

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia.—(AP)—A general flight from Addis Ababa began Monday. Thousands poured out on the Jimma road, the nation's best highway leading to the Southwest, or seeking refuge in the mountains.

Unfounded rumors led many to believe the Italians actually were on the outskirts of the capital, despite that last reports from Debra Birhan say they have not begun an ascent of the mountains south of Dessye.

The rumors were sufficient to start trucks loaded with refugees moving through the city in a night-long exodus which continued unabated today. Most of the 3,000 foreigners in Addis Ababa remained behind, including American, French and Swedish missionaries who are sticking to their jobs in hospitals.

Royal Family Remains

Members of the royal family remained here: Emperor Haile Selassie is believed to be at the front. The hundreds of persons besieged by the British legation, which is well fortified for defense. It has a well-fortified compound and bomb-proof cellars.

Bank to Close

A rush began on the Bank of Ethiopia, which has British officials. The bank issues checks for foreign money but refused to issue foreign banknotes. It announced tonight that transactions would cease April 24.

Many Greek and Armenians, who have practically a monopoly on business, believe they will be allowed to continue under the Italians. But for the moment they looked up their shops and joined other foreigners camping on the grounds of legations.

U. S. Legation Ignored

In the British legation are sheltered about 2,000 Britons, Indians, British Somalis and Arabians, besides a score of white British subjects. The British minister was embarrassed by a clamor from hundreds of persons of other nationalities seeking the protection of a Sikh infantry company on duty at the legation under British officers.

The French and German legations, officially responsible for several other European nationalities, were also filling with refugees. The American legation, in a more dangerous position near the heart of town was unoccupied except for the staff.

Government Offices Continued

to function as usual but virtually all private businesses were shut down.

Your Baby's Health

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

The amount and kind of exercise that the expectant mother should take depends largely on her previous habits. She should never exercise to the point of fatigue, but should stop as soon as she begins to feel tired. The nearer the day the child is to be born, the more likely is she to become tired quickly and require rest.

"Walking is the best exercise available. It should be taken outdoors except during extremely bad weather. Shoes should be worn with low heels, and wide, high-heeled shoes may cause her to slip more easily, with the possibility of accident."

Women who are accustomed to strenuous sports, such as tennis, can stand more exercise than those who usually lead an indoor life.

The racial habits of the prospective mother will probably control the amount of housework that she does under these circumstances. Everyone knows that some peasant women of foreign stock do the heaviest kind of work practically up to the moment of the birth of the child.

The average American woman is not capable of carrying on severe work during this period. Sewing on a machine, that requires constant use of feet and legs for its operation, should be discontinued during the expectant period.

In summer time the expectant mother should be cautious about walking in the hot sun. She should walk slowly and avoid crowds. Two miles daily is an average distance.

When the weather is bad, the exercise may be taken at home, either on an open porch or in a room with windows open. In winter, warm clothing should be worn during these calisthenics, exactly as if the woman were walking on the street.

Deep breathing will insure plenty of oxygen for the blood. It may be advisable to take five or six deep inhalations each night and each morning, but it is not well to make a cult out of deep-breathing exercises.

Among the strenuous sports particularly to be avoided are running, tennis, swimming, skating, and horseback riding. A little dancing may be enjoyed. It should not be strenuous, however, and the prospective mother should never dance in a crowded room.

If a woman is used to driving her own car, she may continue to do so during the early months, but should certainly give up driving afterward, and restrict her motoring as much as possible. Rough roads should always be avoided.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

Real sympathy implies understanding and there is little understanding in the habit of calling attention to childhood calamities.

Certainly some children seem to be chosen by fate for unlucky breaks. They fracture their bones, get measles just at examination time and tear their clothes for no reason, and never win the prizes for which they are working.

These are the very children to need the armor of encouragement and the sword of hope. After all, it is hope that carries us through the world. Hope and faith! Hope that the sun will shine tomorrow, and faith which implants the knowledge that it will! Such a heritage is a priceless one for a child. Priceless—and yet within the reach of every questioning little mind, if the parents of the child understand its significance.

Futility Haunts Failure
Futility—that sense of "Oh, what's the use?" is a black cloud that will shadow any life. If a child fails in school don't say:

"Oh Johnny, won't you ever learn?"

Of course he won't if you implant the idea in his mind that he won't. Pretend that this year was unfortunate and that next year he is going to sail through geography and grammar and he will. If only to show you—and himself!

If there is a child in your family who is developing a complex of fatalism—a child who feels that life is unfair, that his brother gets better grades and his sister gets to do as she pleases, while everything unhappy comes to him, from breaking a leg to pink eye—don't mention his troubles to him. He is spending enough time thinking about them.

Teach him to laugh them off! Show him that he will be the braver because he has conquered so many ailments. Build up a picture of the strength that will be his very soon. He will respond to your thought and begin to smile.

Galaxy Spurs Achievement
Homes need more gaiety. If Mary upsets the maple syrup on the table cloth instead of a pancake, don't scold the child. Certainly she didn't deliberately plan the sticky adornment. She is sorer than you are.

If Johnnie gets 70 in arithmetic when you wanted him to have 100, don't say: "Oh Johnnie, is that the best you can do?"

Better to be gay as you talk to him.

"See here, Johnnie you're a hundred per cent young man and this grade isn't like you. Now next month be yourself. What do you want for dinner? Caramel pudding?"

Don't scold children. Expect things of them. Their own pride will make them measure up.

force as a thing for which too high a price must be paid. Instead of giving meaning to the lives of its possessors, it ends to blight them. The country has walked out from under it.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

TOBY RYAN, 19, is a photographic model, posing for photographs to be used in advertising. Unknown at first, she is chosen as "The Hillier Soap Girl." Toby shares an apartment with HARRIET HOLM, another model, engaged to marry CLYDE SABIN, whom Toby distrusts.

Wentley THE JAMIESON shows Toby with attentions for a time and then seems to forget her. Toby's oldest friend is BILL BRANDT, advertising salesman. She is fond of him but has never thought of him romantically.

JAY HILLIER, president of the Hillier Soap Company, sees Toby taking her to dinner and later she has frequent engagements with him.

Clyde Sabin marries a wealthy widow, and Harriet, heart-broken, attempts suicide. She recovers and later goes to the country for a rest.

Toby goes to dinner with Hillier and he tells her about his youthful marriage, his wife's death and his recent discovery that he has a daughter. Anxious, Toby learns that she is that daughter.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXXVI

IT was another picnic—the early evening of a warm September day. The sun, low in the west, was a golden disc. In another half hour it would drop from sight. Long shadows had fallen on the little valley, darkening the green of trees and shrubs and the field stretching off to the left of the shallow stream. Near the water's edge the first sign of fall had appeared—gaudy patches of scarlet berries in the sumac bushes.

A dozen feet from the stream a campfire smoldered. A girl was sitting on a log, watching the young man who knelt by the fire. It was Toby and Tim Jamieson.

Toby wore light tan jodhpurs and a white shirt, open at the throat, the sleeves rolled up. Except for the shirt, Toby was a symphony in tan—trousers and arms and face almost as richly colored as the honey shade of her hair.

She finished the last bite of a steak sandwich. "It's amazing," she said, smiling. "Who would ever have suspected you, Tim, of having talents as a cook?"

He was also in riding clothes. Tim grinned. "You've no idea how talented I am."

"What is this—sales talk?" "It might be." He looked up at her, but she had turned and was watching the horses, tied a little distance away, grazing.

"I wish I could take 'Happy' with me," Toby said, when I go back to town next week."

"You'll have plenty of other horses to ride."

"Yes, I know, but I like 'Happy.' Look, Tim, how pink the sky is getting!"

HE rose to his feet and turned at her direction. "You're crazy about the country, aren't you, Gorgeous?" he asked.

"Yes, it's still new to me. This is the first summer I've ever been in the country in my life. I'll be sorry to leave."

"You'd be a lot sorrier if you didn't. New York's the place to be in the fall. Best time of the year there. I always get a kick out of it. New shows opening up, new places to go, new people! The Milheim show opens next week, you know. Going to let me take you?"

She was looking at the sunset and did not answer.

"Hey!" Tim exclaimed, "didn't you hear what I said? Are you going to let me take you to the Milheim show?"

"Why, yes—I guess so."

"Hm. You don't seem to be very enthusiastic!"

Toby said, apologetically, "I didn't mean it that way, Tim. I was just thinking about something else."

"I could see that, all right. Must be something important."

"No," Toby shook her head. "I was thinking about last year, Tim. About what I was doing at this time a year ago."

"What?"

"I had a new job—sitting in the window of a five-and-ten store, rolling up my hair on curlers and then taking them down again to show how the curlers worked."

"I'll bet you had a crowd at that window! Were the curlers any good?"

"I don't know. My hair curls naturally anyhow."

Tim laughed. "I guess that's what you might call a story to make your hair curl. Do you know, Gorgeous, every day in every way you become more and more remarkable. The crazy things you've done! And the way things have happened. Just think of it—in one year leaving the five-and-ten store to become the 'Cinderella Heiress.' America's most photographed girl. The Darling of the Headlines. They've a dozen names for you, haven't they? D'you know what I read the other day? That a movie company wants to film your life story and get you to play the lead."

"You know I wouldn't do anything like that."

"A lot of girls would break their necks for such a chance. Debutantes from the so-called 'first families'—"

"Well, I'd rather have my neck unbroken, thanks. You know I hate those things they print, Tim. And people looking at me as though I were a freak. That's one of the reasons I hate going back to New York."

Tim said quickly, "I'll tell you how you can get away from it."

"How?"

"By marrying me. Marry me and we'll take a boat for Bali or the South Sea Islands or Majorca. Any place you say!"

"But, I've told you, Tim—"

"I know. You've told me you've just found your father and you think you should stay with him. But you said that three months ago. Besides, I'm not asking you to marry me right away—though I wish you would. I'm willing to wait. All I want is your promise that you'll marry me some day. Won't you say it, Toby?"

"I can't, Tim. Not yet."

"But you will. You might just as well, Gorgeous, because I'm going to keep right on asking you until you do!"

NEW YORK in October. Crowds thronging the avenues. Shop windows glowing with rich autumn colors. Early dusk and a crisp wind from the river. Boys and girls college-bound. Theater entrances aglow with lights. New York in October.

Toby and Bill Brandt swung along the crowded street. "Here we are," he said, halting before an entrance.

They went inside. It was the cafeteria where they had eaten so often before, the cafeteria with the red and white checked tablecloths and the "Wednesday night specials."

Toby said, "It hasn't changed a bit, has it?"

"No."

They joined the line before the steam tables, carried their trays to a table against the wall. Toby, settling out the dishes, smiled.

"Do you know why I wanted to come here tonight, Bill?"

"He said, with mock alarm, 'Now don't tell me that you're going to go sentimental! You wouldn't say it was for old time's sake, would you?'"

She shook her head. "It's the corned beef hash," she said. "They always have it here on Wednesday, you know. Doesn't it look marvelous?"

"Delicious. Though it's not, if I may say so, exactly the dish for a daughter of the pampered rich. Corned beef hash is plebeian, Toby. Flavored with onions. Humming birds' tongues is what you should be ordering."

"I don't see why. I like hash. Last week I brought my father here and he's been talking about it ever since."

"Your father isn't a very good example of the pampered rich either," Toby. He's a regular person."

"He says the same thing about you."

BILL eyed her, pretending severity. "Trying to win me with flattery, are you, Miss Hillier? I warn you it will have no effect."

She grinned. "You're such an idiot, Bill."

"That supposed to be more flattery?"

"It's anything you want to call it. But, never mind. How's the advertising business these days?"

"Great!" For five minutes he talked about Amerson and Blane's latest achievement. Toby listened, now and then asking questions. This was talk of the world in which she had once lived, a world she had found fascinating.

"You do like your job, don't you?" she said presently.

"Better all the time. How about you, Toby? Do you ever think you'd like to be back in front of the cameras?"

She shook her head emphatically. "No," she said. "And I never will be. I've seen enough of that—girls who don't need work, playing at jobs while others who should have them go hungry. I can find plenty to do without taking work away from someone who needs it."

"You're right about that." He eyed her, approvingly. Suddenly Bill said, "By the way, that little hat you're wearing is all right. I like it."

"It's an old one of Harriet's. I had one she liked, so we traded."

"How is Harriet?"

"She looks grand. That month in Plainesville did wonders for her. Do you know what she says she's going to do? She wants to have 'Aunt Abigail' Dinwiddie come down here and she says she's going to give a party for her."

"I hope she comes. If I'm not invited to that party, I'll crash it."

"You'll be invited, all right."

Suddenly Toby's face sobered. "That reminds me," she said, "of something I was going to tell you, Bill. It isn't supposed to be known yet, but I wanted to tell you—"

He looked up, waiting.

"It's about a wedding," Toby said slowly. "You're going to be invited to a wedding, Bill."

Father of 33, But He Forgets Names

"Chilluns Eat You Up, and Then Walk Off," Says Old Darkey

BURLINGTON, N. C.—(AP)—Alice Gant, negro, is the father of 33 children. He's certain of that.

But he is not certain of their names or where all are today.

"Chilluns eat you up when they are growing up, then walk off and leave you," the 86-year-old negro says.

Hitler's Army Is Issue for French

Voters of France to Go to Polls April 26 and May 3

By JOHN EVANS

Associated Press Correspondent
PARIS.—(AP)—German remilitarization of the Rhineland and the war score in its wake may change many votes in the elections for deputies April 26 and May 3.

Adolf Hitler put political soothsayers on a spot until he denounced the Locarno pact, for as German soldiers stomped into the Rhineland, observers were predicting a sharp swing to the left.

Since then, however, the rightists have taken full advantage of the tense situation and their appeals for "a strong man at the helm" to face Germany may alter results.

Left Leaders Worried
Rightist leaders are warning that the world war broke on France shortly after it turned to the left in the 1934 elections and are asserting that a strong nationalist government, ready to assume a stern attitude toward Germany, is the best guarantee of peace.

Leftist leaders admit worry and discouragement. It is against their policies to advocate big armies and navies.

Political meetings turn to war talk. Voters ask candidates why Hitler tore up the Locarno pact and escaped punishment. The danger of war will, however, be only one of the thorny problems which those of the four thousand candidates elected to the 618 seats in the chamber of deputies will have to face when they assemble in June.

Money Problem Acute
Besides the war menace they must deal with an empty treasury, the devaluation problem and bitter internal discord.

Parliament will be under pressure from the military-minded to strengthen national defense and negotiate treaties that won't be torn up like Locarno with nothing more effective than speeches as a result.

The empty treasury is a sore spot. Financial writers, long accustomed to supporting national credit, make biting observations. They recall that France had to borrow $200,000 in England and that the country's bank account recently has been enough for only a day's expenses.

Government bonds, at 85 a year ago, are down around 67 and Bank of France stock has lost seven-tenths of its 1920 prosperity value.

The "balanced budget" ran a deficit the first month and the national debt is approaching $50,000,000,000 francs, equivalent to $21,000,000,000.

Money isn't needed to enjoy a flowering tree; the beauty of a landscape for every man is free.
And who beholds a garden, though merely passing by, has a right to share its splendor, which its owner can't deny.
A man may tramp the woodlands as if they were his own.
And the walls of nature no grudge some walls are thrown;
And if he's fond of dreaming where fretful cares are lost,
A river bank awaits him at every little cost.
Cook books there are; for reading, good friends there are for play;
Earth offers countless pleasures for which we need not pay.
With very little money, despite the pain and strife,
A man can grow wise wisdom and lead a happy life.—E. A. Guest.

Trail of Lonesome Pine' at Saenger

Sylvia Sidney in All-Color, Outdoor Dramatic Triumph

The first all-color picture of the outdoors, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," comes Wednesday, Thursday and Friday to the Saenger and like Eddie Cantor's "Strike Me Pink" now showing, because of the length of the program, one show only will be shown each night beginning at 8 o'clock with the regular 2:30 matinee Thursday afternoon.

Natural color and natural backgrounds are used exclusively in this pictureization of the John Fox, Jr., novel. It is a story of "feuding" in the Cumberland Mountains, where family battles for reasons long since forgotten.

MacMurray is a young engineer who is assigned to build a railway through the hills. Miss Sidney and Fonda are members of the same clan, and Fonda is in love with the stranger from the outside world, and Fonda's jealousy is aroused. He sets out to "get" MacMurray—but simultaneously the rival clan sets out to "get" him. A battle royal ensues when they all get together, bringing the film to a stirring climax.

Hollywood

By Paul Harrison

HOLLYWOOD.—William Anthony McGuire wrote Ziegfeld shows for 14 years. But when he undertook "The Great Ziegfeld," he determined to make it a biography of the old gloriator and not just a celluloid folio.

And so you are going to look in vain for a great many people identified with Ziegfeld spectacles. There'll be no Sophie Tucker, Peggy Joyce, Eva Tanguay, Ed Wynn, Ina Claire, Leon Errol, Georgia White, Gallagher and Shean, Frank Linney, Fairbanks twins, Bert Williams, Mae Murray, Billie Dove, Dorothy Mackall, Ruby Keller, Helen Morgan, Dorothy Knapp, Lina Basquette, Gladys Glad, or Marion Davies.

"I wish we could have represented them all—those and a lot more just as important," said McGuire. "But it couldn't have been done in half a dozen pictures. Why, the first announcement that this thing was going into production brought applications from 5000 girls—the biggest response I ever heard of."

"Some of them would break your heart. Original Ziegfeld girls, who now are women of 35 to 40, sent in their pictures. We got applications from daughters of Ziegfeld girls, even from second cousins and nieces of Ziegfeld girls. No granddaughters, but I wouldn't have been surprised."

No Help in Story
"There were 15 letters from men who wanted to play the role of Ziggy. One was a college dean who said he looked just like the showman. Every gorilla in the wrestling racket wanted to play Sandow, the strong man whom Ziggy managed in his early days. Some had known Sandow; others thought they were qualified just because they could lift a couple of tons." McGuire pointed out that, of the scores who were featured in Ziegfeld shows, few had any individual bearing on the real story of the gloriator. And there are other reasons why some will be missing from the picture.

Relatives of the late Nora Bayes could not agree to her representation on the screen. The late Marilyn Miller, who Ziegfeld had said was the greatest of his stars, refused to come to Hollywood for a mere week's work.

Few Own Mimics
Of the rest, there were few who could convincingly impersonate themselves on the screen. Harriet Hector, the dancer, is one. Fannie Brice, grand, ageless comedienne who might stop the show at the current Folies, is another.

Virginia Bruce is featured in the picture—but not as Virginia Bruce. Ann Pennington was engaged, but not used. W. C. Fields is mentioned only in dialog.

Eddie Cantor and the late Will Rogers are impersonated by other players. So, too, are Ziegfeld's wives—Anna Held and Billie Burke.

Unfold Tales
McGuire himself as colorful an individual as Johnson's Boswell, recalls some untold Ziegfeld anecdotes which he wasn't able to work into the picture. One is about Fannie Brice, who, when she got her first wire from the producer, walked up and down Broadway shouting it to everybody.

"Look," she says, "I'm going to work for Ziggy!" So great was her pride, so many her acquaintances, that she missed the appointment and almost lost the job.

The producer's flair for publicity was even on the Macabre order. "I'll show you how to get on the front pages," he said, while berating a lazy press agent. "Go to the morgue and claim the first unidentified body of a girl you see. Say that she was one of my dancers. Pay the burial expenses and offer some money to the family. You can do that for $200, and it'll get us on Page One."

Strong Man Trick
Shortly before his death, when Ziegfeld was in Hollywood for the filming of "Whoopee," he proved strangely reluctant to return to the east by way of San Francisco. McGuire discovered that he was worried about some charges which had been brought against him 30 years previously when he had played San Francisco with Sandow and a lion.

Humane authorities had discovered that the lion, standing on metal slats on the floor of the cage, had been literally electrified in the presence of the strong man, who wore rubber shoes.

Shower Springs
The Shower Springs Home Demonstration Club met Thursday, April 16, at the home of Mrs. J. E. McWilliams. Meeting was opened by singing. Mrs. E. Aaron read the devotional with the Model prayer repeated in unison.

The roll call was answered by each one naming the greatest convenience in her kitchen. Mrs. H. C. Collier read an interesting poem on Easter. Plans for "Better Homes Week," which is the week of April 27 to May 4, were made.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted. The meeting time was changed from 2 until 2:30 o'clock always on the third Thursday.

Miss Griffin then told us about the county council meeting, which is to be April 29, at Washington with the Washington club as hostess.

After the reports of the project leaders Miss Griffin talked on "How to Arrange a Modern Kitchen."

At the close of the meeting Mrs. J. S. Reed led several games of which Mrs. V. M. Englund and Mrs. J. E. McWilliams were winners.

The next meeting will be with Mrs. S. R. Englund May 21.

Love Is Valued at $300,000

A divorce suit and a $300,000 alienation action followed the vacation at Miami Beach, Fla., which Mrs. James Edgar II of Detroit, the former Kathryn Crawford of screen and stage, was enjoying when this picture was taken. Her sugar heir mated filed the love piracy suit against Lewis Mallory III, Pennsylvania oil heir, in Miami, after Mrs. Edgar's Detroit suit for divorce, alleging cruelty.

cause they could lift a couple of tons." McGuire pointed out that, of the scores who were featured in Ziegfeld shows, few had any individual bearing on the real story of the gloriator. And there are other reasons why some will be missing from the picture.

Big Crowds Attend Revival Service

Chaney's Are Speaking Each Night at 8 o'Clock at Tabernacle

A large crowd practically filled the Hope Gospel Tabernacle to capacity Sunday night and again Monday night to hear the Chaney's, Oklahoma evangelists who are now conducting a revival campaign here. The Rev. Mr. Chaney spoke Sunday night and Mrs. Chaney, who also is a preacher, spoke Monday night. An outstanding feature of each service is the congregational song service, every one taking part.

Plans are under way to remove the partition now in the main auditorium so as to enlarge the seating capacity of the Tabernacle to take care of the increasing crowds. This meeting which is nonsectarian in character is open to the public, according to the pastor, Rev. Bert Webb.

Following are some of the subjects Rev. Chaney may speak on during the campaign: "When God Rolled His Sleeve Up," "A Nudist Who Met Jesus," "Bad Bargains," "The Lost Axe Head," "Some Reasons Why I Know the Coming of Jesus is Near," "The Unpardonable Sin," "God's Picture Gallery of the Human Race."

A service is held each day at 10 a. m. and a children's meeting at 3 p. m. under the direction of Mrs. Chaney. The evangelistic service begins each night except Saturday at 8 p. m.

The contest is open in every county

The Centennial

Who will be Miss Arkansas Centennial?

The Arkansas Centennial—Hundredth birthday of a glorious state. In a hundred colorful, dramatic events throughout Arkansas her people will commemorate a century of history as a part of the United States. Notable visitors from the four points of the compass, people whose names are known wherever civilization dwells, will come to Arkansas to visit following the precedent and example set by the President, who will formally open the celebration in June.

And over all these festivities will rule a Queen of Beauty, a Miss Arkansas Centennial, queen of the Centennial, with her court and ladies-in-waiting. One girl, and only one, can attain the honor of being Miss Arkansas Centennial, a title never before given, and one that shall never again be held.

Plans to start the search for a lucky Arkansas girl to serve as Miss Arkansas were announced today by the Arkansas Centennial Commission. Contest is to be held in each county in the state to select a representative of that county. Following the county contests several district elimination contests will be held until, on May 30 the finals will be held in Little Rock to determine the ultimate winner. All contestants in the final contest will act as ladies-in-waiting to the winner all through the Centennial year.

The contest is open in every county

SAN ANGELO, Texas—When sun-rise screams of gobblers at the end of a peaceful winter for turkeys in the Hill country.

When those shrill cries echo among the trees, the hens go half way to their mates but battle between the males often occurs when both invade the trysting place.

In Arkansas on May 1 and the contests are to be completed not later than May 15. Prospective contestants and those requiring additional information concerning the Miss Arkansas Centennial contest should write the publicity department of the Arkansas Centennial Commission not later than Friday, April 24, it was announced.

STORIES IN STAMPS

By J. S. Klein

PRESIDENT By 8 to 7

THE popular vote in the election of 1876 was: Samuel J. Tilden, Democrat, of New York, 4,284,855; Rutherford B. Hayes, Republican, of Ohio, 4,033,950. Tilden, nemesis of Boss Tweed, seemed to have won, but the returns from three southern states, and over one elector in Oregon, were disputed, and the New Yorker found himself short only one electoral vote from the presidency.

The Civil War had left Republicans still in control in the disputed states—South Carolina, Florida, and Louisiana—and so the controlling election boards returned their votes for Hayes. The Democrats disputed these returns and the decision was left to Congress. That body appointed a commission of eight Republicans and seven Democrats, and so, by purely a partisan vote of 8 to 7, Hayes became president in 1877.

Hayes' appreciation was statesmanlike. He withdrew all northern troops from the south and, firmly in office, even declared that he believed the Democrats actually had carried the disputed southern states! He remained in office for one term, after which he retired to his estate at Fremont, O. He died, at the age of 70, in 1893.

On Oct. 4, 1922, the 100th anniversary of his birth, the U. S. issued a stamp for Hayes, as part of a new series.

Danger Lurks in Old Battlefields

Peaceful French Farmers Often Find World War Explosives

PARIS—(AP)—While French and German soldiers glower at each other across their respective frontiers, France's shell reclamation mission serenely goes along, excavating unexploded shells from the battlefields of the last war where 4,000,000 men lost their lives.

Farmers plowing in the shadow of the great Maginot line of steel-and-concrete frontier fortifications between Belgium and Switzerland, still come across unexploded shells, grenades and bombs.

Tons Of 'Duds' Salvaged

Eighteen years after the armistice, requests still stream into the war ministry from the devastated regions that explosives found in the fields be carted away.

The war ministry reports that from January 1930 to January 1935, there were 4,320 such demands, that 1,450,000 tons of high explosives were removed and 107,000 tons—too dangerous to displace—were destroyed on the spot.

After the war, the ministry of the armed regions inaugurated shell reclamation service to rid the battlefields of unexploded missiles.

Handled With Care

Excavated shells, handled with care, first are submitted to a "dismantling" test, an operation which consists of withdrawing the fuse, if possible. The operator works behind a heavy, armored steel protector.

If the fuse can be extracted, the contents of the shell are emptied, placed in special containers, sealed and returned to the government. If the fuse resists the operation, the shell is detonated.

Shells of the latter variety—termed "defective"—are buried in a deep hole. Several inches above the interred shell is placed a quantity of dynamite or other explosive material, a detonator and a long fuse. The length of the fuse is calculated to give the operators ample time to run for cover.

Your Proper Weight Can't be Told by Charts, Expert Says

By PHILIP J. SINNOTT
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Calif.—Don't worry if the height-weight tables tell you you're overweight or underweight.

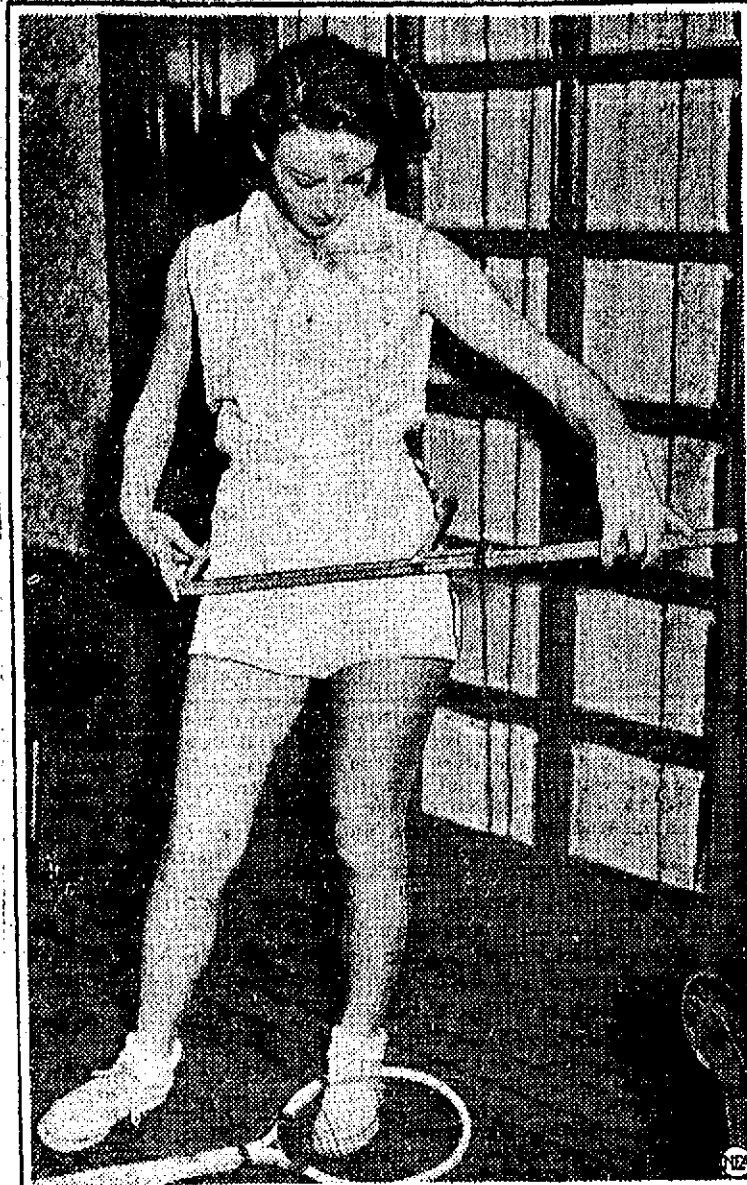

Check your bi-iliac diameter before deciding your poundage calls for a health-wrecking starvation diet, or equally dangerous overstuffing.

Just as its beam dimension is essential in determining a ship's displacement, so it is a factor in determining your weight. There's no more chance of an "average weight-for-height-age" covering every individual than there is for the individual resembling a composite picture of "average Americans."

Dr. Helen Brenton Pryor, assistant women's medical examiner at Stanford

Dr. Helen Brenton Pryor, Stanford medical examiner, who says weight is a matter of individuality, not of averages.

The bi-iliac measurement shows Gussie Raegener, ranking California tennis player and former state junior champion, whether she is trained too fine, or is carrying excess weight while resting from the strenuous work of her net season.

University, declares weight is a matter of individuality, not of averages. This follows her long study of "width-weight," which includes tabulation of more than 10,000 children and college students.

No One Fits In Mold

The tables resulting indicate the worrying and dicting to hit "normal weight" is useless. The tests have resulted in "bi-iliac diameter" becoming an important factor in physical examinations and nutritional surveys in many schools and institutions.

"Correct weight is a matter of individual appraisal, rather than fitting to a standardized mold. The charts prepared on height-age factors strike an average for sex, height, and age. But we are not of identical body structure, so averages cannot apply," declares Dr. Pryor.

"Children and young adults who will impress a medical examiner as properly nourished will appear considerably overweight or underweight when judged by average height-age-weight tables. Some children well nourished will be classed as far underweight because they have a small, bony framework and thin, soft tissues.

"Conversely, study of 200 football candidates at Stanford showed the group averaged 15 per cent overweight according to medico-actuarial standards. These young men were in strenuous training, so they carried no excess weight—but they were powerfully built, with large frames."

May Harm Child

Failure to allow for individuality can have serious psychological as well as physiological consequences, Dr. Pryor avers.

"Consider two boys, of about the same age and height. Racial background and individual physical specifications have given one a small skeletal frame to carry the heavier muscles he will have.

"The smaller child's mother worries over his apparently 'arrested development.' Her fears are increased when a school nurse declares him 'under normal weight.'

"Conscientiously, the mother strives to save her son from malnutrition, to give him his rightful strength. Her son will not be handicapped. Down his unwilling throat she stuffs the calories he doesn't need, perhaps doesn't want.

"He may tolerate this treatment, but he develops a negative attitude. From food, this negative attitude may spread to parental authority—and the end may be a serious behavior problem.

"Or suppose the other lad is declared overweight by height-age standards. The foods his little body craves are diminished or withheld.

"In childhood, he may resort to petty thievery, with the perial of it becoming habitual. The results of such interference with normal growth may even register in the body structure and be manifested later in life."

May 1st Is to Be Child Health Day

States Must Match Federal Donations for Crippled Children

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Child Health day, May 1, draws new significance this year from expanded state and federal welfare programs fostered by the social security act.

Katherine Lenroot, children's bureau director, estimates $3,000,000 is being spent nationally and locally for child welfare in the first half of 1936 and expects an equal amount will be appropriated for the second half.

The social security act authorizes federal grants to states for four types of children's aid—maternal and child health services, crippled children's services, child welfare services and aid to dependent children.

Child Aid Most Popular

Federal money is allotted on the basis of proved state need—after the state has devised a plan acceptable to the social security board for handling the funds and has established a state agency to administer the plan.

States must match federal money 50-50 for crippled children's and maternal and child health services and two-for-one for dependent children's aid. For child welfare, work no ratio has been set.

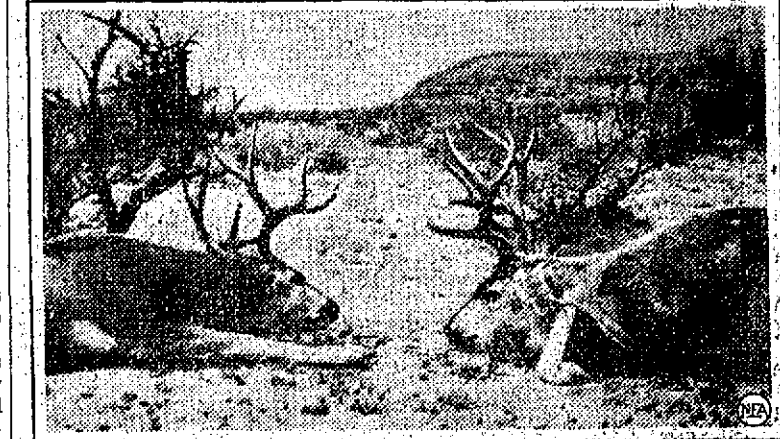

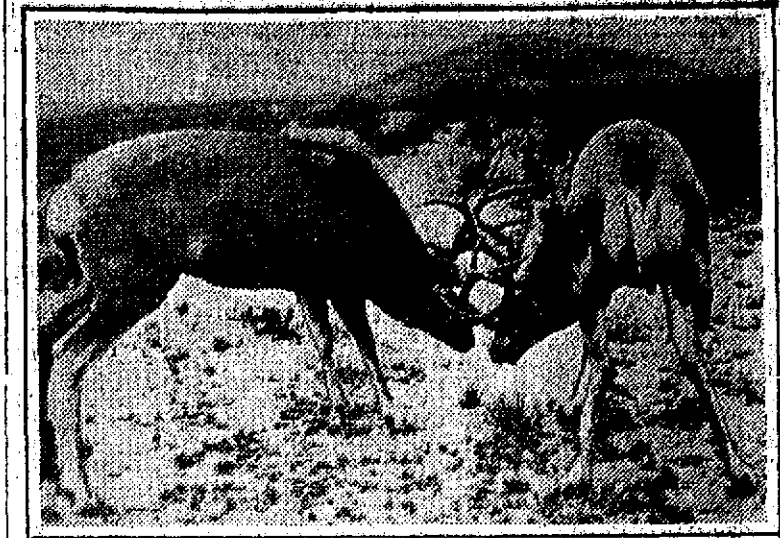

With state legislatures, the children's aid provisions of the social security act have proved most popular. All but one state, North Dakota, have submitted plans for receiving at least one type of federal assistance for child welfare.

Many Plans Approved

For the first quarter of 1936, the social security board approved 38 state plans for child and maternal health services, releasing $387,857; twenty-six state programs for crippled children's services, calling for federal grants of $16,876 and 17 state proposals for aid to dependent children, with federal appropriations totaling $69,175 to 12 of these states.

Snorting, stamping, their antlers locked in their mortal combat, two magnificent bucks, in the rare scene above, are pictured as they fought to the death on a huge granite preserve west of the Pecos, in Texas. The grim result of the elemental duel, waged either for mastery of the herd or possession of a doe, is revealed in the picture below, with the splendid creature at right lying dead, the other exhausted. A few minutes afterward, the latter sprang up, and paced proudly over the Pecos pastures.

Once a Colonel in Kentucky, Always

Some Doubt About Status of 15,000, But Commissions Remain

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—(AP)—Kentucky colonels no longer? Perish the thought! When the state horses prance to the starting gate May 2 for the Kentucky Derby, they'll be as old as the hills and in the boxes as of old. And they'll be as much "colonels" as they ever were.

At home will be their commissions—15,000 of them—brave with blue ribbons and shining with the gold seal of this commonwealth.

The colonels' right to those titles is quite secure. It doesn't expire, it's attacked. That goes, too, for the colonels' commissions and general commissions of this commonwealth, for its major officials, its commissioners and general commissions, its philosopher of state and other officials and dignitaries whom the whimsy of Kentucky's government has created.

"They aren't colonels any more," says Attorney General B. M. Vincent. "From a recent decision of the court of appeals, I deduce that the colonels expire with the governors who appointed them. (The present governor has appointed none since he assumed office.) They have no right to their commissions any more. But," and he sighed—"I can't find in the statute any authority for making them give the commissions back."

"In fact, nowhere in the constitution or the statutes can I find where the governors had any authority to appoint colonels in the first place. They not only aren't, they colonels are more, they never were colonels except by courtesy."

Former Governor Ruby Laffoon, who had a staff of 5,000 replies: "Once a colonel, always a colonel!"

So Colonel Mae West, Colonel Shirley Temple and all their commissions remain safely titled with their commissions intact and their status unimpaired for life—"by courtesy."

Insurance of $35,000,000 was written against risks on the building of the San Francisco-Oakland bridge.

Compensation Act Is to Be Initiated

Union Labor and Industry Backs Constitutional Proposal

LITTLE ROCK—J. C. Morrison, business manager of the Arkansas Industrialist, announced Monday that he would sponsor circulation of initiative petitions for a vote at the November general election on a proposed constitutional amendment to authorize enactment by the legislature of a workmen's compensation law.

His move is the third with such an act as the objective. The Arkansas Federation of Labor announced several weeks ago that it would seek adoption of a constitutional amendment providing for workmen's compensation legislation, and the State Chamber of Commerce revealed that it would promote passage of such an act by the next legislature without preliminary changing of the constitution.

as well as height, Dr. Pryor chose the bi-iliac diameter, or width of the pelvis crest. To simplify measurement, sliding calipers of wood were devised. Charts, from measurements, were built into width-length indices. Periodical examination of certain child groups even reliably predicted body build.

Use of the width-weight tables in a San Francisco nutrition survey of 4500 children on relief disclosed that the actual number of malnutrition cases was negligible. Various parts of the United States report similar reduction of so-called "undernourished" or "overweight" children in schools where body-build measures are considered in weight determination.

Approximately 4000 college students in various institutions were measured in the determination of width-weight indices for ages between 17 and 24 years.

Great Range in Weight

These show that while a girl from 18 to 24 years old and 5 feet 5 inches tall should weigh 129 pounds, according to height-age or actuary standards, the girl of this age and height can weigh as little as 117 pounds or as much as 143 pounds—a range of 26 pounds—and still be normal weight.

That is, if the 117-pounder has a bi-iliac diameter of 9.9 inches and the 143-pounder's bi-iliac is 12.3 inches.

So don't overeat, overexercise, or overstarve if you're said to be off-weight for your height and age. Consider such things bi-iliacally—remembering that your physical makeup, like your mentality, is an individualism, and as such cannot conform exactly to a charted law of averages.

Judging Strength of Candidates Hard

Use of "Stalking Horses" Keeps True Facts Carefully Concealed

By BYRON PRICE
Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington

The Republican pre-convention eggs are beginning to hatch, but the business of chicken-counting is fraught with unusual complications.

So many delegates are uninstructed, and the methods of indicating degrees of favor for individual presidential candidates are so numerous and ambiguous, that it is difficult for even the campaign managers to determine exactly where they stand.

It appears that in spite of all the state laws which have been passed on the popular assumption that they would simplify the political expression of public sentiment, it still is possible to keep many things concealed.

To one unversed in such matters, it might look easy to tabulate the delegate strength of the various candidates to date, and set forth the situation graphically in parallel columns of figures.

In fact it has been possible to do just that, with a fair degree of accuracy, in some previous years. This year it is virtually impossible.

About "Stalking Horses"

To tabulate accurately the delegate strength of any leading Republican candidate today would require, not one column of figures, but at least four.

From the statistical point of view, the easiest class of delegates to deal with are the "instructed" delegates. Yet even here there are many pitfalls for the mathematician.

Some states instruct their national delegates for one candidate with the expectation that they will stand for that candidate to the bitter end. Others use exactly the same language to instruct for a favorite or no other stalking horse, never really meaning that the instructions are to be followed for more than one or two ballots.

But this complication is nothing compared to the situation with respect to a second class—the "pledged" delegates, such as usually are chosen in state-wide primaries.

In the primary a man runs for delegate on some sort of pledge that he will support a given candidate. Sometimes the candidate's name actually is printed on the primary ballot, along with that of the delegate. Sometimes the latter simply makes a public statement. Sometimes there is nothing more than a "general understanding" that if chosen he will do so and so. The result, mathematically, is hopeless confusion.

Appearance Deceive

Then there is a third class of delegates, chosen by state or district conventions which "endorse" one of the presidential aspirants.

In such cases the delegates themselves usually decide in due course how seriously the "endorsement" is to be taken. Even before the first rollcall is taken, they may desert the endorsement entirely.

Finally, there are the uninstructed delegates. Usually it is the custom of campaign managers to claim most of the uninstructed blocs in sight, with the result that the claims overlap outrageously, and all sense of arithmetic is lost. This year the crop of uninstructed delegations is unusually large and confusing.

Flavoring all of this, and making matters even worse, is the circumstance that in politics things so often are not what they seem. A single illustration will suffice to emphasize the point:

In one state, Candidate A and Candidate B each entered a slate of "pledged" delegates in the primary. Candidate C did not enter. When asked why, one of C's managers said privately: "What does it matter who wins? We have personal assurances that half of A's delegates and one-third of B's delegates are for C anyway."

That's the sort of game it is; and whoever tries to keep books on it is likely to wind up with nothing but a headache.

Tax or Reform Is New Bill's Issue

Republicans Closely Quizz Sponsors of New Tax Measure

By HERBERT PLUMMER
Associated Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Politicians here are convinced the hearings on the administration's tax bill before the house, restricted as they were, have laid the groundwork for what is expected to be the focal point in the crucial battle over the measure in the senate.

It is whether the proposed bill is intended to be a vehicle for increasing revenue or one of reform.

Fressed on this point by Republican members of the house ways and means committee, Herman Oliphant, general counsel of the treasury and credited with being the brains behind the proposal, declared flatly:

"This is not a reform bill; this is a tax bill."

His statement, however, failed to satisfy the Republicans. They attempted to pin him down. They wanted to know if Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the federal reserve board, was consulted, if Professor Tugwell was brought into conference, if Professor Felix Frankfurter of the President's Alma Mater and credited with a close administration advisor was consulted.

Oliphant himself, a former professor, was quizzed on his former academic connections.

Termed Regular Proposal

Oliphant steadfastly denied that any of the so-called "brain trusters" figured in the picture; insisted the proposal originated in the regular way in the treasury and bureau of internal revenue.

Opponents of the bill, unconvinced, point to what they call the vagueness and uncertainty among its sponsors as to its revenue-raising possibilities.

They also call attention to the fact that it is estimated around $850,000,000 more will be levied on individuals in the large income brackets under the existing law.

And they refer to the claims voiced from the White House down the line that inequalities which now exist will either be removed or ameliorated under the new bill.

Faces Senate Attack

These criticisms are certain to be heard at greater lengths in the senate. Strict rules of the house imposing limitations on debate prevent representatives from having their full say, but nothing of the kind prevails in the senate.

Charges leveled at administration "brain trusters," however, especially if they come from the Republicans, may prove to be a boomerang in view of the latest move of Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the G. O. P. national committee, in setting up a similar organization.

While Fletcher is careful to point out that his group of professors is a "research staff—not a group of politically ambitious college professors with preconceived ideas" he will have a lot of difficulty in making that label stick.

Governor Is Not Linked in Crime

No Evidence to Connect Hoffman With Abduction of Wendel

NEW YORK—(AP)—District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan Monday night said he had found no evidence to connect Gov. Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey with the abduction of Paul H. Wendel, whose repudiated "confession" of the Lindbergh kidnaping resulted in a three-day stay for Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

His statement was made in reply to a question about reports Martin Schlossman, who is charged with the abduction, had quoted one of his accomplices as saying:

"We got to do this for Hoffman. He's done plenty for Dave."

The "Dave" supposedly was David Bleefeld, brother-in-law of Schlossman and brother of Murray Bleefeld who is sought in connection with the Wendel kidnaping.

"There is not a scintilla of evidence that points to Governor Hoffman," Geoghan declared.

He was then asked if Ellis H. Parker, Burlington county (New Jersey) detective, was involved in the case.

"You asked me about Hoffman, and I told you," he replied. "I refuse to discuss anything in regard to Mr. Parker."

29 Years Barkeeper But Is No Drinker

Vic Lavsa Has "Mixed Em" From Havana to South Bend, Ind.

SOUTH BEND, Ind.—(AP)—For 29 years Vic Lavsa has been mixing drinks all the way from Sloppy Joe's in Havana to South Bend, but he has yet to taste one of his own concoctions. If it wasn't for a glass of beer every two or three years, Vic says he would qualify as a total abstainer. It has been two years since his last glass, but he figures he may quaff another if the coming summer gets too warm.

Vic was born in Vienna about 50 years ago. He speaks English, German, Bohemian, Hungarian and Polish and says he can swear in Spanish. He picked up the latter at Sloppy Joe's in Havana, where, he says, it was hot enough "to make anyone do a little cussin", even if he had to learn the language of the country."

Nowadays Lavsa is head bartender in a South Bend hotel. From his point of vantage, he says people on both sides of the bar are going to have to learn how to use liquor or prohibition will come back.

Vic learned his trade in Chicago while waiting for a job as court interpreter. Later he owned a liquor establishment in LaPorte, Ind., converting it into a restaurant when prohibition went into effect. He went to

Pickets and Workers Clash in Tennessee Strike

A woman striker and a worker are shown being separated by deputies, after one of the several fist fights which marked reopening of the Rockwood Hosiery Mill, in Rockwood, Tenn. Barrages of rocks and tear gas were hurled in the fray. Two hundred workers were brought in to supplant the 300 who walked out recently, after the mill had announced an increase in working hours from 8 to 10 daily, with no change in wages. As crowds of pickets menaced workers, national guardsmen in Knoxville, Nashville, and Athens were held in readiness, in event they were needed at the strike scene.

Texas Seeks Dust Masks

AMARILLO, Texas.—(AP)—Prospects of new dust storms, brought by early spring clusters of mild intensity, sent Panhandle area citizens scurrying for dust masks. A supply of 600 at the Red Cross office here was depleted quickly and officials gave out directions for home-made masks of cheese cloth.
